MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

I would like to thank each of you for the opportunity of serving as your President of the Alabama Public Health Association for 2011-2012. I am very excited and looking forward to working with the Board of Directors in moving the organization forward and building on the foundation that has been laid by previous presidents and boards. I feel very proud of my membership in AIPHA and what our organization brings to the citizens of Alabama through our underwriting of training events and our scholarship programs. Our organization is a leader in bringing some of the best national speakers into Alabama because of our ability and willingness to serve as an underwriter of statewide conferences. I hope that we are able to expand this opportunity to serve our public by continuing to seek out ways to grow our conference business.

In addressing the need to expand and support our current conference business, the organization welcomed Ms. Shelia Puckett into the role of Association Executive effective April 15, 2011. Many of you may remember working with her at the Alabama Department of Public Health in her former position of State Clerical Director. She is the contact person for all conference-related business and will be assisting board members in fulfilling their roles within the organization. I feel that she will be a stabilizing influence on the organization by being available to work on projects and having the ability and problem-solving skills to address the myriad of constant communication from national, state and local sources.

My goals for this year are:

1. The development of an operating budget for the organization. We need to be able to identify our sources of revenue and our annual expenditures. Most members may not realize the extent of our conference underwriting business and what benefits/problems that presents. I hope by having a "formal budget" the membership will know more about the day-to-day operation of the organization and see how the funds are allocated and spent. I hope that future presidents and boards will continue the practice of developing a budget and presenting it to the membership.

2. I would like to explore the possibility of creating additional scholarships for social workers and environmentalists. I feel that our organization's mission of being a leader in providing and promoting health education in Alabama requires us to invest in our members and support their professional development. In my opinion, we need to nurture our future public health leaders and seek out ways to support their educational experiences.

3. I would like to develop a formal structure to support the Vice-President in the responsibility of developing, planning and bringing to fruition our annual conference. In my opinion, the enormity of this endeavor is too much for one person. The Vice-President needs to be supported by an official "Conference Committee," that can assist with the many details involved in planning and producing a successful conference. The utilization of the Section Chairs in this role may be a good starting point. The development of a formal structure for the annual conference would ensure that the educational and organizational needs of the membership are met. In conclusion, I feel like this is one of the most exciting times in American history. There are so many changes taking place in public health at the national, state and local level. As health care professionals we have the opportunity to impact our government as never before, if we choose to speak up for those we serve. It is a difficult thing at times to be the "lone voice" of reason in the room and try to advocate for the needs of our communities across Alabama. I encourage each of you as you make daily decisions to improve public health.

Lastly, thank you for all you do to make a difference in the health outcomes of the citizens of Alabama.

Ross Hudson
President

AMERICAN PUBLIC HEALTH ASSOCIATION HOLDS MIDYEAR MEETING

By Jackie R. Holliday & Ricky L. Elliott

Ricky Elliott and Jackie Holliday were privileged to represent the Alabama Public Health Association, Inc., at the American Public Health Association Midyear Conference June 23-25 in Chicago, Ill. The theme of the meeting was "Implementing Health Care Reform, A Public Health Approach." Approximately 1,000 public health professionals from around the nation attended the conference. APHA leaders, such as Georges Benjamin, MD, FACP, FACEP (Emeritus), Executive Director, APHA, and Linda Rae Murray, MD, MPH, President, APHA, were gracious hosts and guided an outstanding meeting.

Keynote speakers included the Honorable Pat Quinn, Governor, State of Illinois, who has been instrumental in his support of successful public health efforts. Jennifer Granholm, JD, Former Governor of Michigan gave an outstanding address which was both very entertaining and inspiring. Some of the breakout topics included: "How does the Public Describe Public Health?", "Public Health and Quality Care," "Technology Implications of Health Reform," "Fiscal Implications of Health Reform," "Seeking Common Ground: Various Approaches to Improving Population Health," "Developing the Public Health Workforce," "Achieving Prevention and Wellness," "Connecting Public Health and Clinical Prevention," "Engaging Policy Makers and Other Leaders: How Public Employees Can Advocate Effectively for Public Health and Prevention," "Legal Challenges to Health Reform," and the closing general session titled "Where Do We Go From Here?" led by well-known public health advocate, Lawrence Wallack, DrPH.

At the conclusion of the meeting, we were excited to participate in a round table luncheon where we were grouped with other affiliate representatives and section leaders from our area of the nation. We discussed the critical exchange of emerging public health information between APHA and affiliates. During these discussions, it was clear that APHA is sincerely interested in feedback from state organizations and is striving to ensure two-way dialogue. It was interesting to talk with our colleagues and discover that many of the challenges and opportunities that we have in Alabama are not unlike those experienced by other public health practitioners across the nation.

Unlike the oppressive heat that we experienced in Alabama, the weather in Chicago was a little overcast and rainy and in the upper 70's in the day and lower 60's at night. Chicago is truly a beautiful city to visit and one filled with an interesting history along with some remarkable architecture. We were able to sample the best that Chicago has to offer in the culinary arena. The "Taste of Chicago" opened on Friday night in Grant Park and let's just say Chicago Pizza is an unrivaled delicacy. The azure water of Lake Michigan provided an exhilarating backdrop to view fireworks from the Navy Pier. This was truly a great opportunity to hear from some world-renowned public health leaders and network with servants from around our nation as we seek to better serve those in our communities. Thank you for the opportunity to represent ALPHA at this meeting. Please call Jackie at 334-295-1000 or Ricky at 251-947-6206 if you would like additional information about this meeting.

ALPHA RECOGNIZES OUTSTANDING LEADERS IN PUBLIC HEALTH

Individuals who have demonstrated exceptional merit were recognized at the Alabama Public Health Association's 55th Annual Meeting and Health Education Conference May 13 at the Renaissance Montgomery Hotel and Spa at the Convention Center. Awards Chair Viki Brant, Hall of Fame Committee Chair Ruth Harrell, and Scholarship Committee Chair Stacey Adams announced the recipients.

Ross Allen Hudson

Ross Allen Hudson, social work director for Public Health Area 2, was named recipient of the Frederick S. Wolf Award, which recognizes an individual who has been active in public health at the local level for more than 10 years. This person selflessly gives back to the community and is efficient, dedicated and professional in delivering public health services.

Nominators said, "This year's award winner hit the ground running when he began working in public health in 2000. He took a virtually nonexistent Social Work Case Management program and advanced it to a solid program."

His coworkers, area and state peers, and local staff wrote support letters using descriptive terms such as dedication, organized, understanding and problem solving with the ability to find and connect "niches" in program activities.

"He is a micro and macro thinker – with visions of not only how things need to be but how they can be in the future," supporters stated. Described as a true leader, he is not afraid to roll up his sleeves and "jump in" where he is needed. His reputation is of producing work that is well thought out and carefully planned. He is viewed as a critical player in helping build successful relationships with the communities and other partners. Coworkers acknowledge that Hudson has enriched their personal and work lives and feel fortunate for the opportunity to work with him.

The D. G. Gill Award is presented to an individual who makes exceptional contributions to benefit Alabama's public health. This year's honor was given to William Charles Graves, Ed.D., of the Office of Primary Care and Rural Health. A 28-year veteran of public health, Graves serves as the manager and principal contact for Alabama's participation in the National Health Service Corps Program. This program provides incentives and facilitates placement of health care workers in the nation's neediest communities.

Through his leadership in this program Dr. Graves has helped locate hundreds of health care professionals to serve the underserved across the state. Dr. Graves is responsible for ensuring each facility meets the rigid requirements set by the program. He works with hospitals, clinics and private providers who critically need staff to support their work with low income and uninsured residents.

Supporters said, "Having a servant's attitude was a motivator in Dr. Gill's career, and therefore important in this award. In the beginning years of his career, he encouraged many young people as a school teacher, and he still serves his church by picking up youngsters in the community on Sunday mornings. That spirit of servant-hood and encouragement has continued and has been seen as he encourages many students to pursue careers in the health care field today."

Janis Pritchett

Janis Pritchett of the Bureau of Financial Services was named the 2011 recipient of the Virginia Kendrick Award. The Virginia Kendrick Award is presented to an individual who provides notable service to the people of Alabama while serving public health in a supportive role.

Ms. Pritchett has provided notable service in the complex world of finance during her 25 years of service to the State of Alabama, including more than 16 years with the department. She is currently a grant accountant. She serves as a partner, along side of program managers for 29 different grant accounts, assisting those who depend on her for successful grant management.

One program manager said, "Janis is someone who gives her all to her job and wouldn't know how to do anything less." Others described her as "very patient and kind." She enjoys her time with her husband and two daughters, of whom she is very proud. She also enjoys serving her church with her beautiful voice, singing solos and ministering in the church choir.

Wellness Nutritionist Teresa Fair of the Nutrition and Physical Activity Division was chosen as the recipient of the Guy M. Tate Award. She has had an impact on improving the public's health across the entire spectrum of life from working with children in WIC to providing nursing home consultation.

Teresa Fair

Supporters said, "She has a very realistic approach to wellness and as a dietitian is quick to add that a healthy lifestyle is much more than the food one eats. She looks at the big picture and tries to help individuals find what they want to change and how best to make those changes."

Embracing a culture of healthy choices as her natural way of life, Ms. Fair's letters of support continued as follows: "Whether Teresa is creating fun ways to get employees up and moving or serving as a leader in the dietetic association, she always inspires people to do their best."

A co-worker wrote, "It is a pleasure to work with a person whose only desire is to make a difference in the lives of everyone she comes in contact with."

The Guy M. Tate Award is given to a public health employee, group or agency providing outstanding service or contribution. The recipient of this award is to have 10 years experience or less in public health with service promoting and protecting public health in Alabama which goes beyond the daily job assignment.

The Ira L. Myers Award for Excellence recognizes an individual, group or organization that, through excellence in work, has made a significant impact on some aspect of public health in Alabama. Nominees are not required to have a direct affiliation with or represent any specific discipline, group or organization. Rather, they should represent excellence in effort and significant achievement toward the promotion and protection of public health.

This year's recipient is Thomas E. Moody, M.D., of Birmingham, who is the only person to have received both the Ira L. Myers Award for Excellence and the University of Alabama School of Medicine's Martha Myers Role Model of the Year Award.

Supporters stated that Dr. Moody's mission is to assure that every man in Alabama is provided an avenue to be screened for prostate cancer, and he goes the extra mile to do so. Dr. Moody views what he does as his "mission work" and he freely uses his abilities and knowledge to help others. Dr. Moody is described as an amazing man whose commitment and dedication to fight prostate cancer in Alabama is unsurpassed. One of his peers said, "Dr. Moody is a testament to the statement 'one man can make a difference,' and he serves as a role model for all of us."

Dr. Moody is the recipient of numerous awards including the Mary Lou Wright Distinguished Leadership Award presented by U.S. Sen. Jeff Sessions for his exceptional public service and dedication in the fight against prostate cancer. The Martha Myers Role Model of the Year award was presented to him in 2009 for his travels across the state raising awareness about prostate cancer.

Connie Morrow

The Anne M. Smith Public Health Nurse of the Year Award is presented to the nurse who exemplifies the mission of public health nursing in Alabama. Connie Morrow, who has been a public health nurse at the Talladega County Health Department for more than 20 years, is described as a "caring and compassionate nurse who truly believes her calling in this world is to serve and care for others."

Letters stated, "Connie uses her medical training to help those in the community who cannot help themselves. She genuinely loves her patients, and her love extends to the profession as well. Connie serves as a preceptor and mentor for nursing students and as a role model for the new nurses in the area. She is always ready to help and provides encouragement to her fellow nurses."

A peer wrote, "Connie's actions and attitudes have certainly influenced me in my nursing practice. She is the type of nurse I strive to be."

Class of 2011 Hall of Fame

Hall of Fame inductees Lem Burell and Michael Jones were honored for their long-time service to the association.

Lem Burell

Burell has been Public Health Area 6 Environmental Director since 1987. Letters of support stated, "Truly a man of many talents, his leadership in his community is demonstrated by the many volunteer organizations in which he is a member." He is active in the Lakeview Baptist Church where he teaches a Sunday School class. He has been an active member of the Gideons International since 1985 and has held numerous positions of leadership throughout his years of membership. He served as AIPHA president in 2005-2006 and was newsletter editor for many years. He currently serves on the Board of Directors of the Alabama Clean Water Partnership.

Michael A. Jones

Michael A. Jones was an employee of the department for more than 15 years and has been a staunch supporter of AIPHA. He now serves as the State Purchasing Director at the Alabama Department of Finance, yet he remains active in the association. "This continued involvement clearly demonstrates his dedication and commitment to public health and the association. He is known by fellow association members as one who worked hard to increase membership by his caring and attitude. Also, he is also known as 'a man who gets things done.'"

Sandra Renee Faust

Scholarships Awarded

The recipient of the Ruth O. Harrell Scholarship to the Master of Science in Nursing Program at the University of South Alabama College of Nursing was Sandra Renee Faust and winner of the Ira L. Myers Scholarship to the University of Alabama at Birmingham School of Public Health was Sherri L. Davidson, branch manager of the Analysis and Reporting Branch of the Epidemiology Division.

UAB SCHOOL OF PUBLIC HEALTH SEEKS YOUR IDEAS

Innovation has been a recurrent theme in these columns over the last couple of years, precisely because the future for any robust, vibrant institution resides in its ability to harness new ideas, relish creativity, and embrace risk. Writers from Steven Johnson (“Where Good Ideas Come From”), John Kao (“Innovation Nation”), and Buck Goldstein (“The Engines of Innovation”) all focus on how innovation is essential for all institutions to remain relevant here and across the globe in the fast-paced 21st century.

Innovation is essential to assuring that public health, both academic and professional, develops the tools and strategies for the challenges of the 21st century. This month the School started the build-out of the previously unoccupied fourth floor of the Lister Hill Library, almost directly across the street from Ryals. Approximately a fourth of the space will be dedicated to innovation in an area called The Edge of Chaos. Here faculty from the School and other units on campus along with invited leaders from the community will spend time together, unencumbered by the daily pressures of work, to explore and grapple with complex problems whose solutions will come from a broad spectrum of disciplines and perspectives.

The Edge of Chaos is an experiment in the truest sense of the word. New approaches to improving access to necessary health care services or reducing violence or understanding how social networks direct behaviors, for example, will require small experiments to try out ideas, some of which will fail while others will prove successful. But, without the experiment, without the opportunity to “try something” and make mistakes we will never discover the novel ideas that will lead to better health.

When The Edge of Chaos opens next spring a new platform for discovery will begin at the School. As plans for the use of the space become clearer, an active role for the Alabama Public Health Association will emerge. What this role will look like depends on how the members of AIPHA want it to look and function. Creating a model for faculty on the UAB campus is relatively easy -- folks are within one or two blocks of The Edge of Chaos; creating a model for public health professionals who have many competing responsibilities is more difficult, but certainly can be accomplished.

How would you want to be engaged by The Edge of Chaos? What are your ideas? Please let me know what you are thinking ... your ideas are welcome! Share your thoughts with me at maxm@uab.edu. I look forward to hearing from you.
